

The Heart of It All

The Allegheny mountains start the flow
Where torrid streams and tributaries go
To cut the rock formations high and low.
Two rivers then become the Ohio.

The intersections of their interstates
Provide convenient roads & indicates
Just how important this Midwest land rates
Among nearby and far off candidates.

It's said to be the birthplace of manned flight
For standard planes that now go out of sight
Where air is thin and gravity is light.
It's also home to famous astronauts
Whose ventures into space are what we've got
To show the billions spent were not for naught.

Four college students were on campus shot
When feelings for their countrymen got hot
In protest to a war they just could not
Support or redefine just why we fought.
Their legacy lives on and says we ought
To understand completely what is sought.

© Bill Amirault – 2006