

Indian Nations

This piece of history we don't often hear
About the roads that were "The Trails of Tears"
When Cherokees and others landed here
Soon after leaving lands they held so dear.

Their forced evacuation caused much fear
And made these Indian nations persevere
As their abundant lives were left unclear.
These proud, brave people hardly shed a tear,
Despite the tribal strife that did appear.

Today the Sooner State is the premier
Location for wild weather that's severe.
It seems to happen almost every year.
The dark tornadoes suddenly appear
From higher places in the atmosphere,
Imploding neighborhoods then disappear.

These torrid storms contrast from yesteryear
When Dust Bowl droughts forced every pioneer
To reconsider if they were sincere
About maintaining residences here.
Their choice to stay was ultimately clear.

© Bill Amirault – 2007