

The Lone Star State

The Lone Star state of Texas showed its pride
By demonstrating how they had defied
Provincial laws intended to provide
Those Spanish rulers who weren't qualified
To tell these Texans how they should decide.

The Texas province later notified
These leaders they would not be pacified.
This "line drawn in the sand" was hardly wide,
But those defending it, they testified
That their resolve was firm until they died.

"We will defend the Alamo," they cried
Despite the fact they weren't well fortified.
That ambush had to make them terrified
As they diffused the Mexican landslide
And merged this land into the U.S. side.

Today its people won't be pushed aside;
In war and economics they don't hide.
With land and stately homes so dignified,
And weather that keeps everyone outside,
It's always been a great place to reside.

© Bill Amirault – 2006